

SRAP

Through education, advocacy, and community organizing, SRAP collaborates with communities to protect public health, environmental quality, and local economies from the damaging impacts of industrial livestock operations, and to advocate for a socially responsible food future.

Strategies

Direct Community Action

Providing technical and strategic support to fence-line communities facing the threats posed by industrial livestock operations

Programs & Activities

Community Support Program

Help Hotline

Technical Assistance

Network & Legal Connections

Water Rangers Program

Water Monitoring Training & Tools

Resources to Report Violations

Engaging Regulatory Bodies

Grower Transition Program

Movement Building & Collaboration

Organizing and engaging communities beyond individual CAFO fights

Programs & Activities

Food & Farm Network

Leadership Training and Networking

Coalition Building and Partnerships

Policy & Advocacy

Movement Resources & Research

Providing educational opportunities, resources, and tools to allied organizations and movement leaders throughout the sector

Programs & Activities

Community Connections:

Assisting allies in groundtruthing research, legal actions, policy asks, and narrative building

Sector & GIS Mapping

Shared Research & Data

Educational Workshops, Trainings, & Tools

Outcomes

Local communities are successful in preventing factory farms from expanding, while holding existing factory farms accountable

State and national coalitions are successfully advocating for lasting reforms

Communities, movement leaders, allied organizations, and SRAP have the tools, research, and data necessary to amplify unified campaigns and narratives

Vision & Ultimate Impact

Communities across the U.S. successfully replace industrial livestock production with ecologically sound, socially equitable, and economically viable animal agriculture